Note on Tier: This is intentionally blank! Without a top 10 QB or a first round RB, there simply is not a tier one player.
Tier 1
Note on the Tier: I like London the most of any WR in this class. I'd take the RBs first, and I'd be willing to move down off London. London for a later first and a future first is a gold standard return.
Tier 2						Breece Hall	NYJ	2	36	58%	21%		Drake London	ATL	1	8	48%	22%	He's a baller. Separation issues are probably overblown. WR1 of my class
						Kenneth Walker	SEA	2	41	58%	21%
Note on the Tier: On one hand, Kenny Pickett is not a great prospect. On the other hand, the supply of QBs is small and demand should be high in rookie drafts. I doubt I'll have much Pickett unless he is in the end of the tier. Likewise with Cook, I question if he's going to be a big impact as a two way producer, but the shortage of immediate options at the running back position, plus his base rate, should bump him up. The wide receivers are a big tier. I do not have a strong take on the ordering of them. I think Skyy Moore should be higher than his ordering in the class because his 80%tile outcome is really high. Same with Christian Watson. Whereas I think Dotson has a higher floor than Watson. The big lesson will be to arb this. Make two bets instead of one in this range, or collect future pedigree.
Tier 3	Kenny Pickett	PIT	1	20	1st QB at 20 overall is bad. Good franchise with good weapons. Discount version of Mac Jones fantasy wise	James Cook	BUF	2	63	58%	21%	Juice in the passing game.	Chris Olave	NO	1	11	48%	22%	Early breakout, more space player than physical player.
													Garrett Wilson	NYJ	1	10	48%	22%	Later breakout than Olave, and didn't have elite production
													Jameson Williams	DET	1	12	48%	22%	Late Breakout. Detroit was a huge suprise. Offense has a lot of diversity, and could address QB in 2023. Injury a watch
													Treylon Burks	TEN	1	18	48%	22%	Late breakout. Good athletes who don't dominate in college give me pause.
													Jahan Dotson	WAS	1	16	48%	22%	Late breakout. I'm willing to trade to where he is for a future first
													Christian Watson	GBP	2	34	37%	16%	The round two pedigree blends with a good landing spot. Athletic freak, with elite route run production on a small sample size

														Skyy Moore	KC	2	54	37%	16%	Only three years as a WR. Versatility and potential WR1 for Mahomes
Note on the Tier: Injury away running backs with day two pedigree are good here. Robinson is my preferred bet over White. Tyrion Davis-Price feels like a nightmare after Sermon. Spiller should enter week one as a RB2 on the team. Pickens and McBride are good prospects but longer holds. They are above the players after them but I'd lean towards the RBs first in this tier.
Tier 4						Brian Robinson	WAS	3	98	46%	15%	Washington visited with every RB then drafted Robinson. Three down ability, and is an injury away guy to start. Potential Gibson is not there long-term	George Pickens	PIT	2	52	37%	16%	Pittsburgh doing Pittsburgh things. Feels like a just take the profile bet if he gets to the second round	Trey McBride	ARI	2	54	45%	10%	Could be a longer hold. Like the profile as good not elite
						Rachaad White	TB	3	91	46%	15%	Passing game juice but behind Fournette
						Isaiah Spiller	LAC	4	123	24%	6%	Rolls out of bed as the best RB behind Austin Ekeler. Two way ability is saucy. If this causes him to fall, could see big market share at end of second round
						Dameon Pierce	HOU	4	107	24%	6%	Open landing spot likely boosts his cost. I like the player, but be sensitive to cost. Cannot take day 3 RB in round one.
						Tyrion Davis-Price	SF	3	93	46%	15%	I'm not sure I have another SF rookie RB in me. This is simply base rates
Note: This was zone of death range last year. I don't feel that way this year. Pierce is an athletic project as a dead threat. Allgeier is a HHG candidate. David Bell landed in a winnable spot. Wan'Dale Robinson has some likable aspects, but I question the ceiling.
Tier 5	Malik Willis	TEN	3	84	Plummeted but no commitment to Tannehill after this year	Tyler Allgeier	ATL	5	151	20%	4%	Open injury away type. Two way ability	Alec Pierce	CIN	2	53	37%	16%	Older breakout as a good size speed threat is typically a bad bet.	Greg Dulcich	DEN	3	80	25%	13%	Good production in college, and played a vertical role. Opportunity against Albert O
	Desmond Ridder	ATL	3	74	Plummetted	Zamir White	LVR	4	122	24%	6%	Big former recruit, and open RB2 situation with potential for 2023 RB1 job	David Bell	CLE	3	99	24%	7%	Productive in college, fell because of combine testing. Good opportunity in CLE	Jelani Woods	IND	3	73	25%	13%	Huge physical profile. Positional convert in college. Average route run production. May be a long hold

	Matt Corral	CAR	3	94	If CAR's goal is to win a SB, they'll start Corral week 1 and see what they have. I doubt that happens	Keontay Ingram	ARI	6	201	16%	3%	Should compete for an injury away opportunity.								Cade Otton	TB	4	106	24%	3%	Older relative non producer. His tape was better than his resume.
						Hassan Haskins	TEN	4	131	24%	6%	Open RB2 spot in Tennessee
Note: This is a good example of why I don't hate this class. In premium formats, you can take a shot at a decent TE pedigree. I would not do a lot of holding long term here, but there's day two wide receivers in the range that is just a pure base rate bet. I think I'd take a shot on Metchie or Wan'Dale Robinson here and maybe Snoop Conner. In 2TE or deep 2PPR formats, I'd take a base rate investment on TEs in this range.
Tier 6	Sam Howell	WAS	5		Rushing threat is real. Suprised fell this far given college metrics	Snoop Conner	JAC	5	154	20%	4%	Largely unproductive big guy. Struggled at combine, but film folks like his power game.	John Metchie	HOU	2	44	37%	16%	Versatile player but underproduced in college	Jeremy Ruckert	NYJ	3	101	25%	13%	Almost a complete non producer in college. Confusing landing spot given team's investment. They have a type.
	Bailey Zappe	NEP	4		Smaller school prospect competing to backup Mac Jones	Jerome Ford	CLE	5	156	20%	4%	Tough situation to crack. Thought he was underwhelming on tape	Wan'Dale Robinson	NYG	2	43	37%	16%	The physical limitations are real but he broke out early (19) and was top 15 percentile in YPRR and TPRR.	Daniel Bellinger	NYG	4	112	24%	3%	H back type projection
						Ty Chandler	MIN	5	169	20%	4%	On the older side. Film folks like fit in this offense. Potential open depth chart in 2023.								Charlie Kolar	BAL	4	128	24%	3%	Like the profile, but situation behind Andrews is tough
Note: These are more watch players more than guys I'd try and target.
Tier 7						Pierre Strong	NEP	4	127	24%	6%	Has some juice to his game but situation is tough to crack	Velus Jones	CHI	3	71	24%	7%	Unproductive and old propsect	Jake Ferguson	DAL	4	129	24%	3%	Limited physical talent, but open position in 2023
						Kyren Williams	LAR	5	164	20%	4%	Situational player	Jalen Tolbert	DAL	3	88	24%	7%	Older breakout, with thin frame and low competition.	Chigoziem Okonkwo	TEN	4	143	24%	3%	I thought there was more he was capable of than he showed in college
						Tyler Badie	BAL	6	196	16%	3%	Receiving juice	Danny Gray	SF	3	105	24%	7%		Isaiah Likely	BAL	4	139	24%	3%	Buried landing spot but interesting profile in deeper formats. Feel like Tyler Conklin Y3-Y4 watch track
						Kevin Harris	NEP	6	183	16%	3%	Better earlier in his career lands in rough spot	Tyquan Thorton	NEP	2	50	37%	16%	Situational deep threat	Grant Calcaterra	PHI	6	198	12%	0%	Injury history was limiting in college
						Isaiah Pacheco	KC	7	251	7%	0%	Potential to make roster with unproven players in front of him.
